Stroke Corner: Locomotor CPG Podcast III

Stroke SIG Podcast Episode 11: For this week's podcast, host Jackie Loeshelle is joined by members of the Locomotion – Chronic CPG Knowledge Translation Task Force for a Part III discussion on the Locomotor CPG.

In this episode, Dr. Carey Holleran and Dr. Maghan Bretz discuss the Intensity Matters Campaign, which provides clinicians with guidance on how to focus on intensity when providing intervention for improving locomotor function in individuals with chronic neurologic conditions (CVA, iSCI, and TBI). The Task Force has created guidelines that can be found on the ANPT website. This podcast episode will provide clinically applicable knowledge to implement intense and task-specific gait training into your practice. Please send questions or comments to strokesig@gmail.com

New York Time's Op Ed on Weakness

This week, the New York Times published an op-ed of interest to physical therapists working with patients after a stroke. This piece uses experiences of people with stroke as an opportunity to reexamine how our society perceives weakness and dependence on others, and asserts that our interdependence is a sign of our greatest strength.

Finding Evidence Based Neurologic Rehab Resources on APTA.org

The previous PTNow resources are now in a different location and easy to search on the apta.org website! You can search for evidenced based neurologic rehabilitation resources that have been published by the APTA and resources published in EBSCO Database at the same time.

A Rehabilitation Reference Center includes point-of-care resources such as exercise images, patient education sheets, and quick access to medication references.

The APTA Patient Care section has patient care resources to help you in your daily practice — including content and tools previously housed at PTNow. Search for clinical practice guidelines, tests and measures, or other evidence-based practice resources. APTA members also have access to the Guide to Physical Therapist Practice. Here is the link: APTA Patient Care.
