October 2020 Stroke Corner: Reliability and Validity of the "Awareness of Functional Tasks with Arm and Hand in Stroke" Scale

As Dr. Van de Winckel tells us in the video above, deficits in body awareness are very common in our clinical populations; 81% of adults with stroke have deficits with body awareness or difficulty establishing an accurate visuospatial body image in the brain. The The Awareness of Functional Tasks with Arm and Hand in Stroke Scale is the first scale measuring body quality of movement and body awareness in stroke.

Click on the video above to hear Dr. Ann Van de Winckel from the University of Minnesota present her research on The Awareness of Functional Tasks with Arm and Hand in Stroke Scale.

Host Jackie Loeshelle is joined by Dr. George Hornby for a Part II discussion on the Locomotor CPG. The Locomotor CPG identifies the most optimal interventions for gait recovery based on current evidence for individuals with chronic stroke, incomplete spinal cord injury, and traumatic brain injury. This episode delves deeper into the background and design of the CPG, how the literature search occurred, and how the authors interpreted results to develop recommendations. Dr. Hornby also discusses implementation and audit strategies for high intensity gait training in the clinical setting.
